

A MESSAGE FROM THE CLEAN ENERGY INDUSTRY

ATTENTION POLITICIANS,

Federal politics has failed to deliver long-term climate and energy policy. Despite the lack of certainty, we have been working hard to get on with the job of cleaning up our electricity sector and reducing power prices.

2018 was a record-breaking year as the clean energy sector committed over $20 billion worth of investment in new wind and solar farms creating over 13,000 new direct jobs in rural and regional Australia. We also reached 2 million Australian homes with solar power.

We have delivered this remarkable amount of investment because of the 2020 Renewable Energy Target, which has provided a precious four years for the industry to make informed investment decisions.

But that target has now been met and the momentum of our industry is at risk.

We need our Federal Government to put in place strong and enduring policy that will set a clear course for lowering our emissions in the electricity sector, so that we can continue to deliver more of what Australians want – clean and reliable electricity at affordable prices.

We can't afford to waste any more time.

Ahead of this Federal Election, we are calling on you to commit to strong and long-term clean energy policy.

We have the skills and expertise to transform Australia into a clean energy superpower. Don't stop us now.
